

FLOWER ESSENCE THERAPY—TRAINING COURSE

TRANSFORM YOUR LIFE AND THE LIFE OF YOUR PRACTICE

With
Loyola Colebeck, accredited F.E.T.

Sept 2017—
May 2018

This course provides a solid base of international training in the use of flower essences for home or clinic. Flower Essence Therapy (FET) is a highly advanced and scientifically proven, yet extremely simple and safe therapy, but with few clinically sound training opportunities in the United States. This course provides a foundation for future Flower Essence Therapists, an invaluable tool for integrative clinical practices, and an opportunity for self discovery.

Flower essences—unlike essential oils or aromatherapy—are odorless water-based remedies containing specific plants' life force (Qi), similar to homeopathy. Developed by British physician Dr. Edward Bach, they catalyze innate healing processes to safely balance the mind, emotions, and body without harmful side-effects. Compatible with any other health-related field from psychiatry to dermatology, they also promote mindfulness, systemic healing, and deep personal growth.

We will cover a broad spectrum of FET in this course including Dr. Bach's life and work, Transpersonal Patterns for topical applications and scientific studies, psychological portraits and companion essences, Chinese Medicine aspects, and more. We will thoroughly cover the Bach Remedies and will address some of the important FES and Bush Australia essences. Much of the contemporary information that we will cover has not yet been translated to English, so this course is a unique learning opportunity. A certificate will be awarded upon successful completion of the course.

Loyola (Loey) Colebeck is an accredited clinical Flower Essence Therapist (SEDIBAC #402). She translated Pablo Noriega's book, Bach Flower Essences and Chinese Medicine, to English, and speaks at conferences and schools in the U.S. and abroad.
